How the President Sent Secretary Forth Full Armed to Bust the Trust Money Bags.

MADE THEM TELL SECRETS

And Now Threatens to Invoke "Civic Decency" Unless They Stand Pat and Deliver.

By Walter Edward Harris.

(Special From a Staff Correspondent,) NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—George Bruce Cortelyou, the chairman of the Repub-lican National Committee, is said to be greatly annoyed by the roasts he is ceiving from the Democratic press of the country and from Democratic speakers for the manner in which he is using in-Formation concerning the business of trusts, which he secured in his official capacity as Secretary of Commerce and capacity as Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

There is not the slightest doubt that Mr. Cortelyou is employing this information of dilegal acts on the part of certain corporations to compet them to contribute to the campaign fund of the Republican party. The New York Times was the first newspaper in the country to discover a specific instance of it. The New York Tribune at once denied the Charge, though, of course, it did not have positive proof of sits untruth. Thereupon the Times stated that its Informant was one of the best known business men in the city, whose honor and honesty was above question. The Tribune has not again asserted that the charge was untrue. The Wall Street Summary, one of the leading financial papers of the compasserts that Mr. Cortelyou is using official information to compel campaign contributions, but even states positively that in one case the head of a great corporation, which has been conducting business in an illegal manner, was promprosecution if he would give financial aid to the Republican party.

Introductory. Introductory.

Even if Mr. Cortelyou were a St. Francis, of Assis, his standing would be affected by his connection with the Republican campaign, owing to his earlier connection with the Department of Commerce and Labor. He would be under suspicion. A man with a delicate sense of honor would not have allowed himself to 50-placea in the position in which Mr. Rossevelt, placed Cortelyou.

Theodore Rossevelt, as I have remarked afforetime in The Times-Dispatch, is very nearly, if not quite, the shrewdest, smoothest and altogether the most capable politician this country has produced. The story of his scheming to get hold of the purse strings of the trusts reads like a page from the memories of Machiavell.

Chapter I.

Chapter I.

The story might be divided into five chapters. The first chapter would have to do with those speeches made by the President in the fail of 1962, in which he assailed trusts with a ferocity that caused shivers to chase each other up and down the spines of Rockefeller and Morgan and Armour and Baer and Duke and other monopoly magnates of less degree. After the election of that year, and before Congress insembled, Congressman Littlefield, of, Maine, at other request of the President, and to the White House, and after a long conference it was semi-officially amended him Mr. Roosevelt had fixed upon the gentleman from Maine as the man to draft the law which was to burst the trusts. Littlefield, bright, ambitius, able and Bonest, went to work, and not long after Congress assembled he had drafted his law. There was a hard fight against it in the House, but I was gotten through. It went to the Senate, and pretty soon there was a how from the north end of the Capitol it was found that the gontleman from Maine had actually gotten through the House a bill, which, if it became a law, would break the power of the trusts, Mr. Littlefield took Mr. Roosevelt at his word.

One morning the President sent for word.

One morning the President sent for Mr. Littlefield. That was in February 1963. Contemporary accounts of what somewhat, but all agreed that Mr. Roosevelt told Mr. Littlefield the bill would not be reported from the Senate Committee, and that the stormy conversation ended with a declaration on the part of the gentleman from Maine, to the effect that he had been crucified, and it was even sa'd he declared he would never go to the White House again.

The bill word hever, reported from the Senate Committee.

Chapter II

Chapter II.

The second chapter of the story would have to go with the bill, establishing the Department of Commerce and Labor, For years, Colonel John S. Harwood, of Richmond, as chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Travellers Protective Association, had been spending a good portion of every winter in Washington, endeavoring to secure the passage of a bill establishing the new department, but he had always failed.

President Roosévelt became interested business affairs through reports to the new department.

The bill was pessed, the new department established, and Mr. Cartelyous secretary to the President, was made the head of the department. He had had experience in the world of commerce as a teacher and stenographer. The chief burean of Copporations, which was not hen for composition of the ne wdepartment was the Burean of Copporations, which was gotten first overlapped and the present plethoric condition of the Treasury at Republican National headquarters shows.

Chapter III.

Chapter 111.

Chapter three of this most remarkable of all stories of American polities would open with the dismay created in the Republican party by the death of Marcus A. Hanna carly in 1994. He had fought two great political battles as national chairman, and demonstrated that he was one of the most consummate political strategists this country had produced. Many thought it would be impossible to find a man to take h's place. Henry C. Payne, who had been a member of the National Committee for twenty years, was the favorite of the party leaders. Murray Cranes, who had given evidence of p. littent ability of a no mean order, was spoken of. J. S. Clarkson, who had about as much to do with the election of Harrison in 1888 as any other man had. political management; all these were spoken of as worthy to wear the mantle of the dead commander.

One morning the country awoke to find that the President had selected Mr. Cartelyou to take the place of the mighty Hanna. Instantly there were protests filed at the White House. But to no avail. Mr. Roosevelt was abdurate. The Republican press openly criticized the President's judgment, for it was not yet realized that the selection marked the approach of the climax, the culmination of what its probably the finest piece of politics-in-our annule.

And the clerkly Cartelyou, long used to receiving orders, first as secretary to the fourth assistant postmaster-general (he was a Democrat then—as Hon. William A. Jones, of Virginia), then as a stenegrapher at the White House, under Mr. Cleveiand; then as secretary to Mr. McCleveiand; then with the man made the head of the Republican party. He was looked down with official evidence of the violations of laws by the trusts of America, and the way in which it could be used was so simple that directions and orders were really not necessary.

L. Envoi. L. Envol.

And so the trick was done. I cannot but bel'eve that the veteran leaders of the Republican party, who, six months ago, were making sport of the young mar in the White House, and his methods of playing the game of politics, now-have their hats off and acknowledge their hats of the game; of which they had never dreamed.

But we simpler folk are left wondering as to what Mr. Roosevelt hus meant in his oft-repeated pleas for "decency" in public life, and for "civic righteousness," a term, a term which, if he did not coin, he rescued-from innocuous desue-

Aged Candidate, Most Active of Party and the Least Fatigued.

(By Associated Press.) CUMBERLAND, MD., Oct. 11,-Henry G. Davis, Democratic Vice-Presidential candidate, has made a flying start on mi whirlwind campaign through Melyland and West Virginia, accompanied by Senator John W. Daniel, ex-Senator D. B. IIIII and ex-Governor Whyte. Leaving Baltimore this morning on a special train over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, he has made an even dozen speeches, arranged the details of every-meeting, introduced his corps of campaigners to the audiences in all the West Virginia towns visited, has struck out vigorously on State issues, done the greater part of the talking and to-night is the freshest from fatigue of any member of the party. Railles were held to-night in Pledmont and Keyser, W. Va., each of an hour's duration and several others of half that time. Many of the talks were made from the rear of the private car "Graceland," occupied by Mr. Davis and his campalgners. The reception tendered the candidate and his retinue of speakers was uniform in courtesy and was marked by enthusiasm varying according to the size of the audience and the population of the towns visited.

Mr. Davis dwelt at some length on State issues. He reviewed the recent work of the non-partisan tax commission, of which he was a member, and declared that its recommendation that the revenues of the State should be raised entirely by taxing the corporate interests, had been entirely ignored by the Republican Legislature, which, had taxed the farmer and left the corporations off scot free! tional issues.

At the meeting here Mr. Davis opened with a few remarks and then turned the meeting over to Mr. Hill and Senator Daniel. Mr. Hill dwelt on the tariff to a considerable extent, arguing the necessity for a revision no matter what party was successful in the election. Senator Daniel touched upon the live issues of the day, presenting a picture of Republican mistakes and of Democratic prospects.

Davis, Daniel and Hill Speak

(By Associated Press.) BRUNSWICK, MD., October 11.—The BRUNSWICK, MD., October II.—The Davis special was joined at Washington by an escort representing the five Democratic clubs of the District of Columbia, who occupied a special car and were accompanied by a band. The party was headed by National Committeeman Norris and accompanied the special to Brunswick. At Rockville, Mr. Davis, ex-Senator Hill and Senator Danlel made speeches.

Mr. Davis briefly claimed Maryland as his native State. Speaking of his nomination he said:

nation he said:
"I had no more to do with it thun you." Turning to Mr. Hill he continued;
"I was selected by this distinguished friend and I suppose I owe him a great deal for the trouble he has got me into."

Headed for Washington. Senator Daniel told how Mr. Davis left Maryland fifty years ago as the conductor of a freight train. "Now he is conducting another train made up at Louis and is heading with full steam St. Louis and is necaming with the section on to Washington. There is a seat for every good Democrat on that train, and Mr. Davis invites you all to ride."
"But what will be the result if the Republican party should succeed?" asked Senator Daniel.

"You would have elected the President

"You would have elected the President of the United States, Emperor of the Fhilippine Islands, King of Porto Rico, Suzerain of Guam, monarch of Hawaii and the great panjandrum with a little round button on the top."

Mr. Hill, referring to the rain sform, remarked that Democrats could stand any kind of rain except that of the Republican party. He confined himself to a brief discussion of the tariff, saying that on this important issue, the Democratic sarrier stood where it had always ocratic party stood where it had always stood, for a tariff for revenue only.

The Russian commander undoubtedly is aware of the difficulties of the task before him, has measured them well and is confident of his ability to overcome them. If General Kuropatkin possessed an army of half a million men he could leave a sufficient force to attack the triangle while he moved with the remainder around the eastern and western flanks. This is considered in the best informed circles at the War Office to be impraedicable with the numbers now composing General Kuropatkin's army and a frontal advance is the only alternative. Operations, however, are likely to be marked by feints on the right and left. The Japanese probably will make similar movements until both armles become involved in a death struggie.

Mr. Rivercomb made a bad break in asking if the farmers had ever been harmed by any trust. Mr. Flood replied to this by showing up the records of the American Tobacco Company. Mr. Rivercomb made the astonishing statement that Parker was a creature of Wall Street and yet stated that the corporations and trusts were for Roosevelt before they feared to trap Parker. ## "Cut Right" CAMPAIGN IN VIRGINIA

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
JONESVILLE, VA., Oct. 11.—Governor A. J. Montague and J. F. Bullitt spoke to a large and enthusiastic audience in the courthouse here to-day. A large numiber of ladies were present and the entire audience gave the most attentive hearing to both speakers. Governor Montague made one of the finest arguments that was ever delivered to a Lee county audience upon a political question. It was fair, clean, pure and convincing. The Governor was warmly received and highly appreciated by the people. He was met at the railroad station four miles distant by a committee consisting of A. M. Goins, county chairman; R. L. Pennington, mayor of the town; Mr. Ball, the sheriff of the county, and a number of
